

Wroclaw finds new contractor for delayed Euro 2012 stadium

2010-01-19

An agreement with German building firm Max Boegl to complete the Wroclaw EURO 2012 football stadium, whose construction was taken away from Mostostal Warszawa, was signed, pb.pl reports. The company declared to complete works mid-2011.

Mostostal Warszawa, heading a consortium of Polish and Greek construction companies, lost the contract due to delays in construction, Wrocław Mayor Rafał Dutkiewicz said earlier. The first construction work started in September 2008 after an agreement with Mostostal Warszawa had been signed.